M : Let's talk about the newsletter.

W : OK, let's check what we've got so far. We've decided to have one main story and one short story, right?

M : Right. And what about pictures? Should we have one for each story?

W : I'm not so sure about that. Maybe it would be too much. How about just for the main story?

M : That sounds good. Now, what will our stories be? We could do one about the students who visited from Hawaii. Maybe we could use one of the photos they sent us.

Questions No. 20 to 22

When I entered university my parents decided that I should have a credit card. They explained to me that this was a big responsibility, and that I should only use it in an emergency. When I went shopping with my friends, however, I found that using a credit card was just too easy. I started to buy things I didn't need, and I was in danger of spending all the money in my bank account. I decided that I had to find some way to slow down my credit card use. I eventually came up with a very clever idea. After carefully wrapping my credit card in plastic so it wouldn't get damaged, I put it in a bowl of water. I then put this in the freezer and left it. Eventually, it was frozen inside a big block of ice. If I wanted to use my credit card, I had to take it out of the freezer and wait for the ice to melt. While I waited, I could consider again whether or not I really needed to buy that item. My crazy spending stopped. But beyond that, I also realized I needed to develop more self-control to manage my spending.

これで第4問Aは終わりです。次の問題に進みます。

Questions No. 23 to 25

Mamiko : Hey, Anna. Hi, Steve. Have you noticed how many matcha-flavored foods are available everywhere these days? Even outside Japan! It's a very popular flavor in snacks, sweets . . . and noodles, too.

Anna : Now that you mention it, you're right, Mamiko. When I was in the US last year, I found coffee shops with green tea drinks and grocery stores selling tea bags and many matcha-flavored sweets. It's a new flavor, but what's so special about it?

Steve : You know, I think Japanese food in general is quite popular worldwide because it's considered healthy. So I can see how Japanese tea and in particular matcha, which is stronger, might have increased health benefits.

Mamiko : Well, I'm not so sure it's healthy. I think that some matcha-flavored snacks and sweets contain very little matcha but more sugar and artificial flavors. That can't really be good for you.

Anna : Right . . . I see your point, Mamiko. It's hard to know if many so-called superfood products, like those containing matcha or kinako, are actually beneficial. What do you think, Steve?

Steve : Hmm . . . I see what you're both saying, but still, these products might not be so popular if they weren't actually good for you. They are marketed as healthy, so they probably are.

Mamiko : OK. I suppose we can agree to disagree.

Anna and Steve : Yeah.

Mamiko : So what do you guys think will be the next trendy flavor from Japan?

Anna : Well, I've seen a lot of ginger-flavored snacks lately, so—

Mamiko : But maybe something like ume? It's such an appealing flavor and can be used in all sorts of things.

Steve : My guess is . . . yuzu!

Anna: Yeah!

Mamiko: Well, I'm not so sure.
